TRIAL LAWYERS

Gregory Deans and Katherine Stepp, founding partners of Deans Stepp Law, are highly sought after trial attorneys for their results in courtrooms and arbitrations in Texas and nationwide. “We consider practicing law a privilege and a responsibility,” Deans says. “We are passionate about helping our clients navigate through complex cases and ultimately obtaining the best possible results for their unique situation.”

Deans and Stepp met in the mid-2000s working at the largest litigation-only firm in Texas. There, they tried cases for major corporations embroiled in high-stakes commercial disputes as well as catastrophic injury and wrongful death cases. In addition, they developed an aggressive defense strategy as National Counsel for a major asbestos defendant that virtually eliminated new lawsuits.

“We founded Deans Stepp Law because we understood that clients need top quality yet efficient representation. By handling cases on both sides of the aisle, we understand the dynamics and pressure points of our opponent,” Deans says. “Our case-specific strategy develops the best evidence to apply pressure to get the best results before or after trial.”

Whether they represent individuals or Fortune 500 companies, Deans and Stepp provide the personal attention to each client’s needs and concerns. Says Stepp, “We are wholly invested in obtaining the desired outcome for each client and in providing support throughout the process to minimize the disruption to that client’s life or business.” Deans and Stepp have obtained defense verdicts for clients facing the possibility of multi-million-dollar judgments, have recovered substantial amounts for plaintiffs and are known for employing innovative strategies to obtain these results. Deans Stepp Law focuses on complex business issues, wrongful death, negligence, product liability, and trucking liability.
